

Since the first case of the novel Coronavirus in the U.S. was confirmed in early 2020, restaurants across the country have been affected in various ways. Many states are just now determining when to reopen restaurants with the decision based on local and federal restrictions along with health and safety concerns. Restaurants will need to consider how to operate to protect their workers and customers.

Berkley Luxury Group would like to suggest to our brokers and their insureds the following websites as potential resources to assist clients in the reopening of their businesses:

Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) for businesses and workplaces:

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) regarding best practices for restaurants during the COVID-19 pandemic:

National Restaurant Association: <https://restaurant.org/Covid19>

Thank you and we wish you, your families and your customers, continued safety throughout this event.
